Exceptional Moments in Teaching

Karen Krok, MD

“Dr. Krok was one of my favorite lecturers during our gastroenterology block. She made class fun, engaging, and memorable. The topic of hepatitis and metabolic liver disease can be confusing and complex, but she explained the concepts in a manner that was easy to understand and apply to clinical scenarios. During class she challenged us by asking application questions that furthered our understanding of the topics. Currently, weeks after her lectures, I still know hepatitis and metabolic liver disease very well. Dr. Krok not only taught the material very well, but she also has a positivity and optimism that energized our classroom.”

This program is sponsored by the Office for a Respectful Learning Environment.

“Exceptional Moments in Teaching” are narratives written by students about teachers who both challenged and changed them.

Used with permission of Penn State College of Medicine and Karen Krok, MD. Unauthorized reproduction is prohibited.