Figure S1: Percent of new infections averted plotted against the population percent reduction in per-contact risk (PRPCR) in the targeted population. Targeting strategies are indicated by color, while adherence profile is indicated by plotting character. Each line represents the change in infections averted as uptake increases from 20 to 60 percent within a combination of targeting and adherence.
Figure S2: Percent of new infections averted plotted against the population percent reduction in per-contact risk (PRPCR) in the targeted population. Targeting strategies are indicated by color, while adherence profile is indicated by plotting character. Each line represents the change in infections averted as uptake increases from 20 to 60 percent within a combination of targeting and adherence.